Landscape Design: Elements and Principles:

Elements:

These are tools which are used to achieve Principles of Design. The following information will help you judge properties

Line: This is eye movement or flow. This can be achieved by bed arrangement, or vertical changes in heights of plants, trees or shrubs. Line can be straight, curved or free flowing.

Form: Individual plant growth or planting arrangement in a landscape (upright, oval, columnar, spreading, weeping, etc.)

Texture: Describes the surface quality of an object that can be seen or felt. It includes buildings, walks, walls, groundcovers and plants. Texture can be fine, coarse, bold, or medium. Texture adds interest to the garden throughout the seasons.

Colour: Should be personal and have a strong effect on the landscape. May include some flowers, however most of the colour should come from foliage. Using green for continuity along with some colour variety in foliage adds interest. Colour should direct attention to the landscape and compliment the house. Consideration should be given to year round interest not just seasonal colour.

Principles:

Unity/Harmony: The repetition of objects or elements that are alike (repetition of shrubs or colour scheme).

Balance: Can be symmetrical or asymmetrical. Is your eye attracted to both sides of the property?

Scale/Proportion: The size of an object in relation to the house and property or the size of parts of the design in relation to each other and to the design as a whole.

Rhythm/Sequence: Smooth blending of different elements. Garden is one unified scene. Does the property have all year round appeal?

Focal Area: Plants or structural elements that complement the garden. (Elements such as an entry way, pond, fountain, arbour, birdbath, pots, stairways...)
